

Over the past few years I have learned to appreciate poetry as a most efficient way of expressing strong emotion. I selected my own poetry very carefully when determining what would fit best into my mozaic. Writing this piece took alot of thinking outside of the box. Being a guy, I naturally have a guy mentality. Most of my story was told from a female perspective, and to make it even more difficult, my girlfriends perspective. I remembered back into time, relived past event and remembered my cognition, then transferred it into what She must have been thinking at those exact historic moments in our relationship. Call it psycho analytical writing if you will.
